About At-Home Medical Care Support Centers

The 22* At-Home Medical Care Support Centers located throughout Japan provide a wide range of at-home medical care services to meet the needs of local communities, including not only elderly patients with high at-home medical care needs, but also pediatric patients with serious illnesses such as cancer or intractable diseases. In addition, we support the improvement of medication adherence by preventing medication errors and managing medication information using "Anshin Fukuyaku-kun," Nihon Chouzai's original medication support application. We also actively support the health of patients in the community by collaborating with multiple professions through medication consultations by pharmacists and nutrition consultations by dietitians.
